

Patrol Flags Presented

Saturday morning's opening ceremony at Gilwell Field marked not only the official beginning of the second session of S7-602-14, it was also the day for patrol flag inspection.

Examples of patrol flags from previous courses have been hung on display during both weekends. Now it was time for the patrols of S7-602-14 to add their mark to the Wood Badge Legacy. Once again, they did not disappoint. Each patrol delivered an exceptional example that reflected their unique personality.

Creativity was the order of the day. Flag materials and details included fabric, leather, tartan, embroidery, wood-working and assorted other materials not usually associated with flags. Symbolism and imagery were abundant.

One by one each patrol stepped forward to present their flag to the Senior Patrol Leader for inspection. Passing that hurdle, the flags were then presented to the Scoutmaster staff for their inspection and approval. Scrutiny was close, tape measures, and other measuring devices were brought out. After thorough review, it was determined that each flag presented was in fact a Perfect Gilwell Square. Yet one more way that WB2014 has left its indelible impression on the Wood Badge Legacy.

Five Types of Fire

I'm going to try to describe the five types of campfires you (might) see at Wood Badge.

Bonfire. This is the typical 12 year old scout fire. This is the "more is better" fire. Typically, it must at least reach your kneecaps to be a bonfire. Bonfires can go up to 8 feet. Most Scouts LOVE a Bonfire. The only downside is that they are a bear to put out. Do NOT leave your campsite with an unattended fire. If you have a bonfire, make sure it is at night while you are still there.

Reservation Fire. This is the Supersized, Uber bonfire. This is the fire that happens when you put in whole logs, don't realize we have a burn ban, use too many leaves that blow into the woods, or otherwise set the entire Reservation on up. For your sake, I hope it is the former rather than the latter.

Indian Fire. This is the way a fire typically occurs when you don't have steel tools: no axe, no bow saw, no chainsaw. You have to crack everything over your knees or pick up lying around. These are frequently spotted during backpacking trips, but rarely occur during camp-outs or Wood Badge. If you have a fire in the morning as you wake up, this is the recommended approach.

Cooking Fire. If you want to use the embers of a fire for cooking, this is your fire of choice. It starts off with smallish logs and as soon as the coals get going, you quit adding logs. My dad once said "maturity is the ability to delay gratification." That means I have never seen a Scout pull off a cooking fire and few adults. The hard-core cooks know how to do this one.

as our campfire (safely) fades away*

Generations in Scouting

Scouting never has been more diverse in gender, ethnicity or age of its volunteers. One of the roles of a leader is to engage the minds and ensure commitment of all participants in order to form a cohesive team. In order to do that, scout leaders must understand generational differences, be aware of how those differences impact each generation involved in Scouting, and learn ways to work together across generations for a better future.

That was the message of the Generations in Scouting presentation on the afternoon of Day 4. The presentation proceeded from a basic definition of a "Generation," to a description of the four generations of volunteers and two generations of youth involved in Scouting, to a discussion of the common characteristics of each generation, and concluded with suggestions for working with each generation. The presentation is summed up in the Handbook and a list of sources and suggested readings is included.

Scouting tomorrow will be as different from today as it was from 30 years ago. Together we can create the greatest change in Scouting history and equip future generations of leaders to build upon our legacy.

We will see during the cooking competitions if someone scores with this fire or whips out the charcoal briquettes.

Fireplace Fire. The last fire you will see at Wood Badge is the fireplace fire, seen only at Gilwell Hall. These are nice, warm, enjoyable fires. They drive away the cold, entertain during breaks, and bring the fond smell of wood smoke. They generally come in one size. Unless Ron lights one up for an indoor Campfire Program this should be moderately sized. If Ron does light it, you could go outside and see the flames rocket up out the top of the chimney – trust me, Bennie and I looked last weekend.

Good luck with Weekend 2 of Wood Badge and stay safe with your fires. Keep them controlled, get a fire bucket, keep them attended, and put them cold out.

Fellowship at the End of the Journey

By Mark Larson, Course Mentor S7-602-14

Though the training component of Wood Badge lasts only two long weekends, that time can be pretty intense. There is a lot of material put in front of everyone with games and activities that are designed to reinforce that material. By simulating an entire month of a scout program, the Wood Badge course also speeds up the process of team-building. This allows the patrols to experience the 4 stages of team development during the relatively short time they are together.

Everything is new and exciting on the first day. You meet a few staffers who shuttle you from one activity to another. Your small group starts to learn a bit about each other through patrol activities. At some point however, personalities start to clash and different methods of communication and leadership come out.

There are many presentations on subjects you didn't know scouts thought about like vision, leveraging diversity, and inclusion. You learned some details about how teams form, and methods for teaching others. You learned the basics about listening and communication.

As the patrol works together on a patrol project and flag they start to understand more about each other and what their unique skills can bring to the group. Discussions about tickets allow each to learn about the others' scouting experiences back home. By Weekend Two, the patrol is usually working pretty well together and is starting to enjoy each other's company. The staff member assigned to the group is able to pull away as the patrol is able to lead itself.

The patrol takes on the cooking duties and is now hosting guests for dinner. They are more able to communicate and work together. They take pride in their patrol and enjoy the spirited rivalry with other patrols. Perhaps they are even starting to step out of their patrol setting to meet other members of the troop.

On the evening of Day 5, the tickets will be finished and the staff departs—leaving the Troop on its own. After all, the Troop has made great progress in a very short time. This final dinner, evening campfire(s), and ceremony are opportunities for reflection and celebration. You might even find patrols joining together with others in Troop 1.

The shared experience a patrol goes through during Wood Badge usually creates many lasting friendships. Though very different people, everyone has the common bond of scouting. During these last two days, take time to enjoy your final hours in this special situation. Meet as many of your fellow Scouters as you can for you will never come across a better group of people anywhere.

“Scouting is a game for boys under the leadership of boys under the direction of a man.”

Baden-Powell

Baden-Powell on “Playing the Game”

In making our young citizens, therefore, it is essential to try to get into them the habit of cheery co-operation, of forgetting their personal wishes and feelings in bringing about the good of the whole business in which they are engaged—whether it be work or play. One can teach the boy that it is exactly as it is in football. You must play in your place and play the game; don't try to be referee when you are playing half-back; don't stop playing because you have had enough of the game, but shove along, cheerily and hopefully, with an eye on the goal in order that your side may win, even if you may yourself get a kick on the shins or a muddy fall in helping it.

But the best form of instruction of all for a Scoutmaster to give is by the force of example. It is essential if he is going to succeed in putting the right character into his boys that he should himself practice what he preaches. Boys are imitative, and what the Scoutmaster gives off, that they pick up and reflect. Instructions, and especially orders, are apt to have different and even opposite effects with the boys—order a boy not to smoke and he is at once tempted to try it as an adventure; but give him another example, show him that any fool can smoke but a wise Scout doesn't, and it is another matter. Therefore, it is of first importance that every Scoutmaster, with this great responsibility on his shoulder, should examine himself very closely, suppress any of the minor faults which he may—in fact, is bound to—possess, and train himself to practice what he preaches, so as to give the right example to his lads for the shaping of their lives, characters, and careers.

The object of this is to enable him to find out if Scouting really suits him after all...whether he can, in a word, play in his place and play the game for the good of the whole.

If he can do this he will be doing the most valuable work that a man can do, viz. teach his younger brothers the great virtues of endurance and discipline, pluck and unselfishness.

TCP– Do You Feel It?

TCP: Tradition – Commitment – Performance. Our goal is for each participant to gain a broader perspective on Scouting and how their personal involvement is critical to the successful Scouting experience for not only their son or daughter, but for every Scout, and as well for Scouting’s overall purpose and mission. This happens through a deeper understanding of Scouting’s history and traditions, and leads to a long-term commitment of the participant to the Scouting program and an enhanced level of personal capability and performance in one’s personal role in Scouting.

Tradition – Wood Badge opens up to each of us the links and ties all the way back to Lord Baden-Powell, his vision for Scouting and how it still holds true today. The history and traditions of Scouting are handed down in no small way through Wood Badge, for the benefit of Scouting even in a modern world. Our understanding of these traditions and history instill both pride and appreciation for Scouting and its position as the most influential youth character development program and movement in the history of the world. Baden-Powell was not simply dreaming when he stated his vision that Scouting could lead to world peace.

Commitment – In Wood Badge, we prove to ourselves by completing the course and finishing our tickets, that we are capable - and even likely - to make a life-long commitment of our precious volunteer time and effort to the Boy Scouts, with an understanding of the incredible impact Scouting can have on the lives of our youth. During Wood Badge, we are enveloped in a sharing of ideas and beliefs in what Scouting has done for our own sons and daughters, and what it has done for our country and our world. We gain a deeper understanding of the value of continuing our involvement in Scouting beyond the tenure of our own children in the Scouting program, and the many avenues of opportunity to do so.

Performance – Wood Badge, its own game with a purpose, provides us hands-on experiences and in-depth training that allow us to build new skills, gain more knowledge, and understand new perspectives that will help us to enhance our performance in our role in Scouting. Learning in the Wood Badge course, whether accomplished during the two course weekends, or while we work on our ticket, helps us see that knowledge gained and skills learned in Scouting also can be applied in our workplace and our family life, leading to improved individual, team, and family performance (try that phrase on your spouse – family performance!). We broaden our viewpoint beyond individual performance, and instead focus on the achievements of the whole team. We can Win All We Can!

Easy Dutch Oven Cobbler

- 1 white cake mix
- 1 12 ounce can of Sprite or 7-Up
- 2 cans fruit pie filling (we like blueberry)

Note: This cobbler is prepared in a camp-style cast iron Dutch oven which has a lid with a lip so that hot coals may be set on top of the pan. Pour fruit pie filling into a 6 quart Dutch oven. In a separate bowl, mix soda with cake mix. Batter will be lumpy. Pour over top of pie filling. Bake with 20 coals on top and 10 on bottom until cake is golden color. Serve hot.

Something Special in the Cobbler

I love to eat good food and have collected many wonderful recipes over the years. One of my favorites is a Dutch oven dish that I learned while taking Scout leader outdoor training in the fall of 1980. We made a simple cherry cobbler, but added a small twist. A fresh banana was sliced up and mixed in with the other fruit. The banana melts into the cobbler as it cooks. It adds a mysterious richness of flavor that Scouts love, but just can’t quite place.

That cooking philosophy can be applied to your leadership style. Always remember to add a little something special that can’t quite be placed, but makes all the difference in the world. Each person’s special something will be different. It can be as simple as a warm smile or as complicated as deeply researched woods craft. Whatever yours is, the scouts will notice that you have put something extra into your work. They will know that you care and will in turn put more energy into Scouting. Young people appreciate effort, even if they can’t quite place what is special about it.

Scout Prayer Etiquette

In place of the command "Let us pray," more inclusive, non-sectarian ways to invite participation in a blessing include the following statements and invitations:

"A Scout is reverent"

"Would you join me in prayer?"

"Will you all assume an attitude of prayer?"

CRITTER-SCOPES

-  Beaver: Your industrious nature, experience with wood, and skill with construction may come into play today. Others may be wary of stepping into the mud! Use your skills to work with other critters for a successful outcome on a special project.
-  Bobwhite: Preen those feathers for you have the opportunity to lead others in an activity of great honor. Dignity and pride of purpose will give you stature among all who participate in this activity.
-  Fox: Being shy and solitary will not serve you well today. You will be called upon to work with others and contribute to the greater good of all in the woods. Agility and perseverance will be the best tools to use.
-  Eagle: Changing your flight will lead to positive opportunities. Speak up, but don't apply pressure. Diplomacy coupled with knowledge will help you gain the support you need for success.
-  Owl: Take charge and make changes that will help you add skills and experience. Don't sit back waiting for someone to give you the go ahead. You are the one who best sees your own vision.
-  Bear: Keep things rolling along but don't neglect any problems that may be simmering in the background. Be aware of what's going on around you so that your den will avoid any pitfalls.
-  Antelope: Serve others and you will serve yourself. Unselfish devotion to the task you have been assigned will raise the esteem by which all others regard you to an even greater level than before.
-  Buffalo: Give whatever challenge you pursue your best shot. Stick to the route that offers less uncertainty regarding the results you are trying to achieve.
