In this mostly expository talk, I will introduce quantum computing and show how it can accelerate solutions in graph theory. While classical computers are based on Boolean logic, quantum computers are based on linear algebra. The talk will touch on some not-so-familiar ideas from numerical linear algebra that may help to make quantum computation a reality.